

SWEDISH AND DANISH CRUSADES INVOLVED NO CONFLICT WITH ISLAMIC PEOPLES AT ALL

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Many people just assume that all parts of Europe were involved in Crusades of Christians against Islamic People. I have a good impression of Danes and Swedes today, and consider them warm, gentle, civilised and kind people. That's my impression from having a Danish ex-lover from around 1999-2002, around three years and I wished to marry her in 2005 but it was too late.

Now I consider Denmark and Sweden to be friends opposed to White Supremacist World Order that is strongly backed by Bill Gates and some American White people – not all but mostly an American White effort.

It is a great pleasure therefore to tell my Asian friends that Swedish and Danish Crusading did not involve Middle East at all. In fact Swedish Crusades were against Finns, Tavastians and Karelians during period from 1150 to 1293. The Danes are known to have made at least three crusades to Finland. First mention of these crusades is from 1187 when crusader Esbern Snare mentioned in his Christmas feast speech a major victory from the Finns. Two next known crusades were made in 1191 and in 1202. The latter one was led by the Bishop of Lund, Anders Sunesen, with his brother.

That is from Wikipedia. This is a historical trivia on one hand; on the other hand, there is absolutely no historical Crusades-linked animosity of Swedes and Danes and people of Middle East at all. This is an opportunity, therefore, not to create strife that is not historically grounded. Today in 2021, there is no reason for assuming that Swedes and Danes were ever involved in the Crusades that the Muslims remember. They were far away and never involved in the Crusades in Middle Eastern history.

This seems like a small issue but it is not. Crusades shaped the history of people in the Middle East as much as those of many in Europe. And it is very important to understand which peoples were actually involved in Islam-Christian Crusades and who were not. Swedes and Danes were not involved in Crusades against Muslims at all.

1. ZULF WILL EXPLAIN WHY THIS IS GOOD

Muslims have a Divine view of all of Existence. They consider all events to be explained by the Will of Allah. And so they will easily accept that it was Will of Allah that even though Danes and Swedes were involved in Crusades with people other than Muslims, that they were not in conflict with Muslims. Then that historical fact will have special Divine meaning as with all other events. This is good for diplomacy between Sweden and Denmark and virtually any Muslim Community in the world. All you have to do is to mention that your people never had any conflict with Muslim people in 1100-1300 at all. They will review their chronicles and mark you as having been chosen by Will of Allah not to have had any conflict with Muslims and then they will interpret it in one way or another as therefore Allah's will to have given them this knowledge now so you may have friendly relationships devoid of past strife.
