

ZULF IS A GENTLEMAN AND A SCHOLAR OF HIGH CHARACTER BILL GATES IS A MALEVOLENT PATHOLOGICAL LIAR OF LOW CHARACTER

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

There will be very few opportunities to examine this situation between myself, Zulf, and Bill Gates which is quite clear. I am a man of Integrity, of High Character, naturally a Gentleman and a Scholar. In contrast Bill Gates is a Malevolent Pathological Liar of Low Character.

There are several interesting features in this situation.

- Wealth and power does not imply High Character
- High Character is much more important than Wealth and Power

It is instructive to note here the classical works of the Ancient Greeks and the later characterisation of Friedrich Nietzsche of Nobility. Bill Gates is actually one of the least Noble Characters alive today and probably one of the most ignoble Characters that ever walked upon the Earth. I am quite poor in Money at the moment, but my Character is extraordinarily high compared to Bill Gates. I am also far better educated than him.

Here you have a dichotomy, classically interesting, of the relative independence of Virtuous Character and Wealth and Power. The example is instructive. Bill Gates is far more ignoble than any hobo that you will meet in any American city. And yet Bill Gates has successfully acquired Money and Power. Unless Harvard manages this situation correctly and completely washes its hands off Bill Gates, it is almost certain that Harvard will be pulled down to shipwreck and ruin by the weight of Bill Gates.

Now Zulf does have extraordinary genius in Science, and Four-Sphere Theory is correct, and it is true that it is a greater accomplishment than any that Bill Gates has managed in his entire life. But in Moral Virtues, I am quite high but not as high as many others. Indeed, I am quite proud of my accomplishment in showing that Aristotle's main thesis that Virtues improve Eudaimonia which I proxy by Life Satisfaction is correct by the measurements of World Values Survey Wave 7. I am 48 now and Bill Gates Power tricks have cause metabolism problems where I have blood loss and other problems and I am diagnosed with diabetes as well, so I am not exactly competing for any higher Character status. I am just naturally a far higher Character than the Bill Gates of the world. His Wealth and Power does not intimidate me in the least because I do not think Wealth or Power is higher than Virtuous Character. You can consider this Christian or Buddhist or whatever, but I just consider it True.

Now Harvard will be judged, and cannot be failed to be judged by Harvard's particular decisions in this case. Harvard will be wise to accept that Virtuous

Character is more important than Money and Power and will face total destruction of its reputation if they are confused.

I don't normally make these issues so blunt and clear, but I am surprised that these things are not as clear to many American Institutions as they have been to several thousand years of Civilisation around the world and not just in Asia.

1. THE POWER OF MORAL CONSCIENCE DOES NOT WORK BY RANCOR

Rancor is simply a specific sort of emotional expression. All parts of moral language and emotions are subtle and deep in the human evolutionary history although their particular balance is influenced by particular cultural developments. These are superficial. Perhaps an Ancient Greek man would respond to theft a bit differently than a Japanese man or a Frenchman or an Englishman. These differences will be superficial for there is genetic basis for the moral judgment that is buried deep in the history of the Human Genome; later evolutionary adaptations and cultural developments provide the expression of superficial type. Of course individuals have different cultural and literal instructions that might have some cognitive effect, but the actual judgments are intuitive. Emotions are tied to this in most cases because they have had some minor effect in regulation of societies but by and large there are deeper processes of the human psyche that engage these judgments. They cannot be suppressed by issues of Money and Power, of a superficial sort of social status that comes from these, or any amount of television and newspaper propaganda. Cultures can give some preference for expressions of certain forms of moral judgment and reaction, but cannot suppress it.

And so when Harvard makes wrong decisions by delusional ideas about their stature in the world, they will have a rude awakening in the end when they lose trust as higher educational institution. That is the power of Human Nature.

2. ZULF'S THEORY ABOUT BILL GATES' SUCCESS

Bill Gates himself might think what he likes about his own financial success. The major factor that drove Bill Gates' success in my view is no talent in technology at all but his ability to convince the American public that he is a Sesame Street character who is benevolent of good character. This was a total outrageous falsehood all along for in actuality he was a psychopath with absolutely no moral compass. But the gullible American population drank up his self-promotion as a good cat and that is 90% of Bill Gates' success. If the truth were known he would have been bombed to obliteration instead of give success, stature, etc. in America. His technology genius is not that great. His code is not better than mine at all. His genius in technology does not measure up to Steve Wozniak and others in technology. His secret is extreme malevolence and total lack of any moral compass combined with a Sesame Street benevolent image.
