

ZULF'S THEORY OF RESPECT

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

1. I WANT TO BE RESPECTED EVERYWHERE

Wherever I go in the entire world, I want to be respected. That's a psychological need of mine. My philosophy of Respect is quite elementary. I want to be respected and I can't tolerate people disrespecting me. I can't stand Bill Gates and want him dead because he is disrespectful and worthless and does not have achievements equal to my pinky finger. So I don't tolerate these insolent sons of bitches like Bill Gates.

Now I can generalise my view, and consider that I am willing to respect everyone in the world until they give me reason to disrespect me, like the case of Bill Gates.

2. RESPECT FOR AUTHORITY

Unless I am considered Authority and am respected for that reason, I don't care. I want to be respected, and I am willing to respect anyone at all if they are respectful. People ought to be given a small window of opportunity to find if they are respectful or not, and if not they ought to be shunned.
