

BILL GATES IS 66 BUT DOESN'T KNOW WHY WHITE PEOPLE IN AMERICA DON'T WANT TO ENSLAVE ALL NON-WHITES

I am not white. I am Asian-American, and immigrated to the country in 1987, and got my Permanent Residency in 1997 expires in 2031, and Naturalisation is a formality. America was founded as a Democratic Republic in 1776. It's around 245 years old as a Democratic Republic. I went to high school in New York. I was the valedictorian in 1991. I got good grades in American History and American Government classes there. I have never encountered an American person, white or non-white who had any problems understanding how Democracies work. Everyone I have ever befriended, who I worked with in the industry, and almost ever met understood that people have different political views and opinions and in Democracies, the governance has to find ways of getting some method of guiding the state from the various vast positions. Our government in the United States handles this by multiple levels of elections. You have local elections for House Legislators, you have elections for Senate Legislators, and you have popular elections for the Executive Branch, i.e. the President of the United States.

As a matter of fact Democracies are quite popular for a long time. I was born in 1973, and almost all of Europe and many parts of Asia and Africa and South America are Democracies. The reason the world developed Democracies, in Athens and elsewhere is to ensure that individuals are not denied their sovereignty in the management of the states. Democracies elect various positions of governance of states because people do not agree with each other at all. So usually new efforts for the Democracy requires a lot of effort by people to make their positions public and persuade vast masses of people to agree with their positions and then there are elections. In America, this involves all manner of speeches to crowds, kissing babies in front of people to seem like a good guy, making all sorts of promises of heaven and paradise that are impossible to keep, stating values that you think might get people excited and so on.

I am just amazed that Bill Gates, whose proposal is that "Whites Are Superior so we should enslave all the non-whites and rule the world with an Iron Fist" did not ever think that maybe, just maybe, other White People would need a campaign to explain his position and he would need all sorts of legislative spots filled and he would need a faction to push Congress, and win a Presidential Election. He just assumed that because he has the outrageously bad cockameme idea, White Americans would just agree with him by Jedi Mind Trick. That is quite amazing. This man has been telling us for four decades that he is a luminary and a great intellectual genius who reads Enlightenment Now on weeks of vacation in lakeside cottages. And suddenly he is surprised that American White People are not on board with his plans for the world. He doesn't understand why people don't just accept his proposal without protest.

What can I even say about this? I am just stunned into silence over here.
