

AN IDEA THAT IS SPECULATIVE

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

I am single, and the other day I told a woman I was talking to on my romantic mate search in a deep claim of pride and conviction, "Zulf's word is gold, and when I say something it's more reliable than Divine word of Almighty God". Well that's how I would like to see myself obviously, and for the most part I do try my best to deliver. The things I write here are not guaranteed, and I withhold my promise and word for them because people hate it when someone gives their word and does not deliver.

So Madam Lagarde gifted me $500 mn and I have not seen a penny of it thanks to the evil theiving criminality of the outrageously lawless greedy Bill Gates who is a total cunt, and believes that all people's money and things are his own. His mother apparently never taught him about civilised norms.

Anyway, so my idea is that I want to create two companies in San Francisco. For one which will be a technology show I already know what property I want to develop. It's on Albion and 16th. It looks bad now but it's 20,400 sqft warehouse two storeys. I can see bottom floor with thousands of nodes and top with offices top notch for technology guys.

The other one is still in flux. It will be a Quant Positive Psychology show, but I am starting to expand the idea. I liked Carl R. Trueman's The Rise and Triumph of the Modern Self and suddenly the thought occurred to me that this could be a formalised international scholarly-slash-empirical quant psychology show with a nice Renaissance Library and some good group of top scholars with reasonable tenure package. Like World Bank or IMF, a research institute with actual Psychology products and seminars and expertise in humanistic matters.

This seems like a reasonable idea. I went to Princeton, and I am quite aware of the positive exponential benefit of gathering of good bright people with interest and scholarly zeal. I want an organisation that has ambition and confidence to move the entire world with Civilised conditions that make it appealing for people to move to San Francisco and attract the brightest people in the world and become the world's top hub for this sort of thing.

I don't want to specify too much details. The idea is to be sure that the decisions lead to world's best hub for the right sort of thing, and the right sort of thing I will sort out over time.
