

HOW BILL GATES' ILLITERACY PUT HIM TO DEATH

Bill Gates does not understand the great wisdom that was uncovered by John Locke, Thomas Jefferson and the Enlightenment political philosophers. They introduced intrinsic Natural Rights including Life itself.

This is no academic matter, for misunderstanding this is precisely what is getting Bill Gates put to death.

You see, Bill Gates is so unbelievably stupid and illiterate, his puny and unintelligent mind thinks like this. Some lives are more valuable than other lives. There is a hierarchy, and in this hierarchy, which is determined by ethnicity, white lives are more valuable than non-white lives. This reasoning is not just flawed but suicidal.

First of all, I am not white, so I think this reasoning is a total joke. Obviously my life is more valuable than Bill Gates, and indeed of the whole goddam human race combined. Why in the world would I think otherwise? Do you think I am so stupid to agree that anyone's life, be it Jesus Christ or the the greatest astronaut or scientist or philosopher or whoever's life is more valuable than mine? You are out of your mind. I would not even dream of thinking that. Why would I do that? My life is obviously more valuable.

Now the above paragraph is totally compelling to me. It is true, and I can use it to deny Bill Gates'theory trivially. I would immediately say, that's a nice little idiotic thought, kiddo. The problem with it is I will wipe you out in two minutes if you take it seriously because why should I want this sort of rubbish that denigrates my life to exist?

So then the question is who is going to be right? Bill Gates in his infinite stupid illiteracy, will say, well whoever has the power to dominate will have the right to decide. And his puny unintelligent mind is reaching the early Pleistocene stone age thinking. Everyone thinks their life is more valuable than everyone else's. Therefore it's every man for himself. Now going back to what I was saying, to me it's obvious that my life is infinitely more valuable than everyone else's. I will never dream of considering anyone else's life as more valuable than myself. That would be laughable for me. Now let me enter Pleistocene situation. I see a large number of men in those leather kilts and wielding clubs. I say, well my life is much more valuable than theirs, but they have clubs to snuff out my life, so I will carefully avoid the danger they pose to my life. Note that I would not actually ever believe that any of their lives is worth more than mine. That's not even remotely possible. But I will take precautions and keep my precious life alive by avoiding situations where these worthless Pleistocene cavemen whose lives are not as valuable as mine manage to bash my skull and end my far more valuable life. So that is the Hobbesian state of Nature political situation. Here two things are true. My life is still much more valuable than all of their miserable lives combined. However, they are quite primitive in their thinking and I am not in the mood to argue with these types, so I don't seek agreement with them. Instead I take the full and true knowledge that my life is much more valuable than theirs, and take measures to preserve it from their barbaric brutal romping and bashing habits.

It is crucial to understand that even if a Pleistocene caveman with a club bashes my skull and kills me, my life was still much more valuable than theirs. It just so happens that they were able to bash my skull and kill me.

Now in a Darwin-Hobbes state of nature, there is no security of life, and so the death and killing patterns could totally not respect the value of my life – which I could never agree is less than theirs.

The Enlightenment philosophers John Locke and Thomas Jefferson and others produced a great advance in considering a far more wiser course that has been adopted by the entire species of Man. They came up with the great innovation that every infant human child ever born on Earth has a Natural Right to Life and so that there exists a Universal Human Order of Law even before any sort of legislation that says that "this baby's life is sacrosanct and it is illegal and morally wrong to kill the baby." Their innovation is stunningly beautiful because it matches my clear view that my life is more valuable than everyone else's in the entire universe while allowing me to skip past Pleistocene and see that it is okay if my brother over there and sister over there also considers their lives to be more valuable than everyone else's. And when we all learn to understand this, we can have a human society that is less brutish and barbaric than the jungle. Bill Gates' illiterate puny intellect is not able to actually get past this point of civilised evolution. He has decided to consider the world intrinsically as the conflict of some arbitrary imaginary tribes. These are high school level thinking. Usually some high school students are very bad at understanding Natural Rights because their intellect is too underdeveloped to grasp these. Bill Gates is stuck in this level of intellectual development for whatever reason. That is why he reasons with racial hierarchies. He is too illiterate and stupid to understand the substance of advances made by John Locke and Thomas Jefferson.

As a result, he considers US Declaration and UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights 'PR' and 'fluff' and formality etc. He genuinely thinks that these are ornamentation. And that is just fundamental intellectual limitation of Bill Gates. You will meet some of these inept students whose level of intellect is too low to actually grasp Natural Rights.
