

BILL GATES' INNOVATIVE ADDITION TO WHITE GLORY

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

I understand all parts of T. S. Eliot's The Waste Land quite a bit better than Bill Gates. I have studied and dissected and lived the poem throughout my life. Consider just this.

Datta: what have we given? My friend, blood shaking my heart The awful daring of a moment's surrender Which an age of prudence can never retract By this, and this only, we have existed Which is not to be found in our obituaries Or in memories draped by the beneficent spider Or under seals broken by the lean solicitor
In our empty rooms

The awful daring of a moment's surrender than an age of prudence can never retract, by this and only this we have existed, and I gave up all my material possessions in 2008 in order not to compromise my efforts to abolish all Nations for a Great Republic of Humanity.

I want to see if a single White Glory enthusiast even understands this part of the poem. Ganga and Himavant and Datta, Damyatta, Dayadhvam, and chant of three shantih are now part of 'White Glory' of Bill Gates.

Listen, little illiterate punk kid, you cannot even reach 1/10 in understanding the poem in as much depth as I have lived the poem. You can take your 'White Glory' and shove it where the sun don't shine. The Waste Land is not about any White Glory but an effort of poetic genius that connects West and East with a perfection that is rare for we have the chastising of Jesus Christ, "Son of Man, you cannot say or guess for you know only a heap of broken images" to the Fisher King and the meditative Buddha in the East.

The armies of raised flags of White Glory types would be lost in the world here hardly noticed at all.

I am amused. Bill Gates will do what next, consider not just Hammurabi white but also Vedas too, and Buddha. The man's idea of innovation is quite entertaining.

Listen, Bill Gates, Persian Muslim Ibn-Sina formulated the ennobling character of Romantic Love that gave birth to Lancelot. Persians have more right to the love affair of Guinevere and Lancelot than your attempts at absorbing everything under the sun into White Glory. You are very funny.
