

BILL GATES IS TOO STUPID TO UNDERSTAND THAT POWER DOES NOT MAKE ANYONE SUPERIOR

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Bill Gates is too stupid to understand that power does not make anyone superior. Let's go through this example one more time.

You have a hick without education who knows how to use a shotgun. He takes a black handkerchief and puts it around his face hiding his mouth. He drives a pickup truck. So he can drive pickups, he can use a shotgun.

He goes to the local bank and he does a hold-up. There are a number of people who were waiting in line to talk to the teller. Standard American scene. Make the town Groveland, in some state.

He holds the gun pointed at the head of a man on the line. The man is alarmed and complies to his demands. The man is reasonably well-dressed gentleman. He is a Professor of Anthropology from Harvard with decades of work and several graduate texts and research monographs, married, several kids off to college, and he came to visit some family in Groveland. He has many accolades from Society of Anthropologists and is a favourite among Harvard students who fill up his lecture classes. He knows several languages, has traveled the world, and plays several musical instruments.

The man holding the gun is not high school educated, and is a drunkard, rowdy in bars, and holds up people in banks. He has power of life and death over the other.

Who is superior here? No one in any part of the world will think it is the man with power of life and death over the other man.

Bill Gates is far too stupid to understand this. He believes that the man with power here is superior. He would be right in a primordial situation of various pre-historic fishes fighting for survival, in a way. But he does not understand notions of human superiority and inferiority at all.

As a result of his dimwitted stupid mind, he makes two false propositions in a chain. He says (a) Whites are superior, because (b) whites have more power.

Both (a) and (b) are false, and the conjunction of the reasoning is also false. Bill Gates is seen to be an irrational deranged criminal whose understanding of basic issues is not even at fifth grade level.
