

ON JUSTIFIABILITY OF CASUAL SEX

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

1. DISTRIBUTION OF CASUAL SEX NEVER JUSTIFIABLE IN THE WORLD

The following is distribution of people who believe casual sex is never justifiable.

The mean of this distribution is 42.88% which is much higher than the American percent 17.9%.

2. MY VIEWS

I think Casual Sex is almost always justified. I don't believe that sex is justified for minors under 18 at all, even for boys, and that that could be a criminal matter or at least a matter for public concern. But for adults, mutual consent is primary. I believe that Natural Right of Liberty extends here for consenting adults to have or not have casual sex and it is not anyone else's business. I do think that both partners are responsible children born out of casual sex. But I don't generally get overly concerned with other people's sex lives; I think people have a right to have whatever sort of private lives they want provided criminal laws are not violated.

Having said that I do not sleep with women I do not love, and that is my own development, and I do this for my own sanity and happiness. I feel that it would desecrate important sacred spaces for me to sleep with a woman I did not love. But I have had a number of live-in lovers over the years and I do not care for moral police on my private life. It is no one's business but mine.

3. HOW DID OCCUR

I was born in Bengal in a Muslim household, and statistics make it clear that close to 80% consider casual sex unjustifiable. I can therefore infer, at 48, that somehow my sexual values have not been inherited from Bengali society. I got married soon after college to my ex-wife Natalia Brizuela and we were young and things did not work out between us. I then was with a Danish woman I met at MIT from 1999-2002 in Cambridge and New York. I was living in New York, so I can trace my development of values from teenage years in New York through Princeton when I was a virgin to later life when probably Sine Jensen influenced me in some way that led to my relaxation about sexuality. I am probably closer in values to Europe than even America.

4. UNDERSTANDING SEXUAL MORES OF THE HUMAN RACE

Sexual mores of the Human Race is far more conservative than my own. Thus I consider it important to find some way of understanding and engaging with a variety of sexual mores in a reasonable way.
