

THE SOURCE OF TRAGIC FALL AND EXTINCTION OF BILL GATES III

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Today I will begin to address the rather difficult question of seeming contradictions in my characterisation of Bill Gates.

On one hand I have said that Bill Gates is a malevolent evil dangerous demon who poses a threat for harm to billions of people, a figure like Sauron and Palpatine. On the other hand I have also characterised Bill Gates as (a) an insignificant amoeba, (b) a worthless cunt, and (c) miserable wretch.

One might be justifiably confused, for the two sorts of characterisations do not seem compatible. For how can a miserable wretch, an insignificant amoeba, and a worthless cunt be at the same time a great danger to the human race threatening liberty and well-being for untold billions of the human race?

Let me first point out what is the wrong answer here. The wrong answer is that these are just curse words that do not represent an accurate characterisation of Bill Gates. I will fervently insist that these are correct representations of Bill Gates, each and every one of them.

Another wrong answer is that they are subjective views based on one's perspective. This is also not the case, although there is more substance here.

There is a deeper answer that will evolve in time, but let us consider the representation a bit further by use of perspective.

From a grander perspective one can be a miserable wretch, worthless cunt, and insignificant amoeba while from the smaller perspective one can be a grave threat to untold billions like Sauron or Palpatine. So the principle here for coherence is a certain local-global dual view of Bill Gates.

I will let my dear reader work this out as an exercise, for I have some other things to do soon.