

ZULF'S PHILOSOPHY OF HOW TO DO THINGS

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED
ZULFIKAR.AHMED@GMAIL.COM

Stanford University is interested in me. Now even if you give me something, full professorship, funding, authority and privileges, you should realise that I am 49 years old and I won't do things any differently than I have done all my life, for good or ill.

I believe that every day you ought to do something that is something reasonable in the general direction of a goal that is fundamentally important. That's it. I don't believe in all sorts of estimates of revenue and great success and what will transform the Silicon Valley overnight and all the rest. Just every day, a little something in the right direction. If people are happy doing what they are doing, then this is just optimal.

I do not believe that people accomplish a lot of great things by all sorts of time on extravaganzas. Good comfortable life, every day something meaningful, low stress, and an eye that people do feel that they are not wasting their precious moments of life on the thing. That's it.

And things happen, good things, over time. You won't even notice that you've gone very far. Evaluation is good. But human rhythm has genetic depth. I do not like to push myself for any sort of 'extra mile'. Keep the miles tolerable and comfortable. I hate organisations that press into people's lives too much. I believe that people should go home by 5-5:30 and not do weekends and overnights and have a good civilised social life and only do what they genuinely care about for reasons other than money. Money and salary etc. should never be a hassle.

I don't want a lot of demands from Stanford even if you give me something. If you give me something, you implicitly trust that my way is a good way and not create barriers for me of red tape, formalities, demands for compliance to things that are not just civilised norms etc.

I don't really care much for the culture in American Corporations. Expect me to produce a different sort of thing. And I don't want a huge amount of hassle. I treat people well.

1. UNITED STATES CORPORATE CULTURE IS A SAVAGE JUNGLE

You see, in the United States, you can't really trust that the management of most companies are not going to fuck you up the ass and leave you on the sidewalks with a lot of bullshit rhetoric. It's a total jungle really. There are laws that protect people very very mildly. I don't look to other companies to know what is right. I know what matters and how to take care of my peeps. I don't want situations where people look at me and say, "Zulf, why did you screw me over. My child is sick, my wife has college debts unpaid, and I trusted you." You see, United States had decided that those things are just noise, contrary to all civilised norms, long long ago. I have no intention of following the "best practices" for a few pennies and a large amount of hypocritical soundbites. Fuck that. I can do better than that in my sleep. I am a civilised gentleman. I don't play that bullshit game.

2. STANFORD UNIVERSITY YOU KNOW BILL GATES USES US WAR POWER IN MY DEEP INTERIOR

Regardless of what you actually do about it, you know that Bill Gates used US War Power in my Deep Interior. You also know that Bill Gates used US Industrial Power and White Racial Power (breaking all White Law) against my Deep Interior, that Bill Gates obstructed $500 million to me from Madam Christine Lagarde of ECB.

I need more special privileges from you. There are several women I am interested in romantically, all from Ukraine. They are good ladies. I want you to take responsibility for ensuring a proper family life with them in Mission District San Francisco. I want a good CEO pad – near Mission and 16th and I want some effort to overcome Bill Gates intrusion into my private life. This seems odd but Bill Gates is an extremely dangerous archcriminal, so I do need institutional powers to handle this.

Can Stanford University take these tasks on. I know it's my private life and it's not usually the business of Stanford. Unfortunately Bill Gates invaded my Deep Interior with horrible Industrial Power so I am severely handicapped in extremely unusual ways.