

A SHORT HISTORY OF CIVILISATION

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

This is elementary school knowledge for me, but seems unfamiliar to many Americans.

History of Civilisation starts with Amorites, today's Iraqis and the Sumerian/Mesopotamian Civilisation, around 4000 BC, plus or minus. This was a flourishing full urban Civilisation with all sorts of Divine King, and Money, which they invented, not Jewish or other people, lending, laws for marriage, etc. They had rich fucks and poor fucks and everything you expect of a complex urban civilisation with an Empire. They had something going long before anything in Roman Empire etc.

Then, you have the Egyptian Civilisation sparked. And that's around a thousand years later. China had independent Civilisation brewing for a long time; and then Indus Valley in India.

In all these cases Europe was hunter-gatherer. Europe had no Civilisation at all until after Indus Valley was already a literate urban civilisation.

At this point you have Civilisation push from Middle East, Anatolia northwest and the Mycenaean Greek Civilisation. Then finally Hellenistic Civilisation in Greece was the first flourishing European Civilisation.

Let's count the centuries when Asia had Civilisation and Europe did not. Earliest Mycenaeans were 1200 BC and first Sumerians were 4300, so for three thousand years Europe had no Civilisation at all, just hunter gatherers and before Europe's first sign of Civilisation Asia had multiple literate urban Civilisations.

Then you had Hellenistic Greece, then you had Roman Empire, and so on.

Now Roman Empire was quite impressive but all the innovations that Rome gained were invented in Mesopotamia and Egypt which filtered to Ancient Greece and Rome was built from many many elements from earlier Civilisations.

Who collapsed Roman Empire? Well, white people – Visigoths and Ostrogoths and other barbarian tribes of Europe. It is not true that Islam was responsible for collapse of the Roman Empire.

So you had various settled Civilisations in Asia that were peaceful. And then you had Renaissance in Venice and other Italian City States and progress in Europe to all sorts of gunships. This then led later on Spain and Portugal wanting to extort sea trade because the military technology was good, and that led to the Seaborn Empire of Europe which amounted to extorting Asian sea trade at gunpoint. This then grew to European Colonial Empires where again military edge was used to extort other countries whose defenses were not good enough. Then you had the last five centuries including Industrial and Scientific Revolutions and Atlantic Slave trade, colonisation of America and Australia, etc. all the way to twentieth century and the Second World War and then decolonisation etc. Until you reach 2010s-2020s when Zulf overthrows all of past Western Science and establishes Four-Sphere

Theory and promotes Unity of Human Race and so on. So that's zero to Zulf in a brief snapshot.