

ZULF'S TOTAL CONTEMPT FOR UNWRITTEN RULES IN AMERICA

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

I hate unwritten rules. I spit on unwritten rules. I crumple up unwritten rules and burn them. I cannot stand unwritten rules. Unwritten rules are the bane of my existence.

I will vow never to even consider any unwritten rules seriously. I will do it as a principle. I simply cannot stand unwritten rules and will always have the highest level of contempt for them. And that's a promise.

I don't care if some of the unwritten rules have worked for other Americans. I will turn away from unwritten rules in disgust.

Why such hatred for unwritten rules? Well I am a virtuous cat. I am fine with my intuitive judgment the most. Unwritten rules always slow me down and frankly my dear, I don't give a damn.

If you think any unwritten rule is truly great, contact your Senator, contact your Congress representative, and make it a written law of the United States. Then it's formal, and I will submit to it without much fuss. But do not even dream about all sorts of unwritten rules, because I will totally denigrate them and disrespect them and not even feel a tiny bit of guilt. They are claptrap.
