

ZULF CLAIMS TO BE THE ONLY AMERICAN ALIVE IN 2021

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

I just realised that I might be the only person among 330 American population who genuinely believes that all men are created equal endowed by their Creator certain natural rights, among them Life, Liberty, and pursuit of Happiness, and that governments are instituted among men to secure them. I believe this so strongly that I believe that natural rights of eight billion people have to be secured.

That's good. That means that 1.4 million white people in government in America are posers; they are clowns, and I hold the standard of America and they are just actors on the stage.

It's fascinating. So all these people do not hold these truths to be self-evident. I am the only American on Earth now? Quite spectacular. These people do not hold these truths to be self-evident. They think they are what, decoration? Wow. That's outrageously funny. So they think that these are some sort of looney tune, not self-evident truths which are sacred to our nation, huh?

What do I care? I am fine being the only American on Earth. I like that sort of thing. I'm special.

1. LET ME EXPLAIN WHAT I MEAN

I spent years of my life examining whether these proclamations such as 'all men are created equal' are actually true, because I come from an Aristocratic family in Bengal and people believe that they are higher than others and so on. I was the first-born in an Eastern aristocratic family and was raised to see myself as unequal, from a better family than others and so on. I was not particularly enthusiastic about inequality but I was introverted and accepted my privileges by habit. I was a Princetonian and took my elite orientation as reasonable. But I knew about all manner of political issues and was liberal-leaning first after university because intelligent cultured people seemed agree on various sorts of things that were sensible to me. It was later, after I broke with International Socialist Organisation around 2005 and I returned to New York that I began thinking about fundamental issues. Eventually I examined the ideas of human race being a single race biologically. Then it was clear that all men are created equal is absolute truth. So my faith in the preamble and also natural rights are absolute faith. Then today it just occurred to me that in 2021, people do not hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal with natural rights endowed by the Creator and governments are instituted among men to secure them. In fact for most of my life, the sophisticated discourse about American government does not mention purpose of government at all and focus on the post-corruption America, the horrible destruction of our government introduced by the KKK goon Harry Truman, NSC-68 in 1950. I have very little interest in the rest of the rubbish introduced in American Government. The US Declaration of Independence Preamble is very good. It's absolute truth, marvelous. It's strong. Much stronger that "We're gonna bomb the Asians and wipe them out and take all their things and celebrate with Turkey! Murica Yeah! Murica Yeah!" Those things are just totally icky part of America.

2. SELF-EVIDENT TRUTH VERSUS ABSOLUTE TRUTH

The founders' language, that of Thomas Jefferson was 'we hold these truths to be self-evident'. What I have done with quite a bit of effort is to convert this to 'absolute truth' with the aid of modern human molecular genetic discoveries of the past two decades on equality. The founders were not as technical as I am. So they did not separate the claims and mark them.

For example they could have said.

- We believe it is a self-evident truth that all men are created equal.
- We believe that it is a self-evident truth that all men are endowed upon their creation by their Creator certain inalienable natural rights, among these are Life, Liberty, and pursuit of Happiness
- We believe that it is a self-evident truth that governments are instituted among men to secure natural rights

For me the first of these I personally have pioneered as being absolute truth because self-evident truths could be subjective and this is a great discovery of mine because it is remarkably difficult for people living in organic historical societies to really see this subjectively. We are all biased about equality in ordinary life; we have to be. We cannot treat people who are bad cats who will lie and steal our things as equal to good cats. That's just life, so it is hard to grasp equality. We have to in many situations, such as classrooms and other institutions where people need to find some sort of egalitarian rational situation to explicitly pronounce lack of privileges but in general population we are not naturally attuned to equality. So my discovery of absolute truth of equality at creation for all human beings is a great advance of knowledge for human race. So I have verified that Thomas Jefferson was an uncanny genius in his pronouncement of equality. This was the great hope of French Revolution, one of the ideals of French Republic too. It's highly nontrivial. Look Vishy Anand and Magnus Carlsen are superior to me in chess; they are not equal to me. And those sorts of inequalities are part of human life and necessary. But they were both created equal to me. In other words, they gained inequality afterwards, not at creation. Thomas Jefferson was a slave-owner and sometimes people like to focus on that. I don't give a damn. He was a profound great man just for telling us, the human race a profound truth of equality at creation. I verified it so I know how deep this truth is. It is ethnicity-independent and global. That is astounding genius, and truly the work of a great man. John Locke was not as sure about this; but Jean-Jacques Rousseau (1712-1778) had written about inequality and so Thomas Jefferson did not cook it up completely in isolation. But it's not ideological nonsense. I, for the first time in human history have shown its absolute truth. And that means that all these rabble-rousing revolutionaries in Europe, in America during the Romantic period were spot on. It's not just Jefferson. Rousseau and others were believers in égalité. My influence in life is Percy Bysshe Shelley who was born a bit later. He lived between 1792 to 1822 and his Prometheus was a republic god.

What about the other two propositions. The idea of natural rights of individuals I strongly believe in, and I believe they need to be examined for stronger formulation and extension but these are natural, Life for certain and Liberty with qualifications, and pursuit of Happiness as well. Now what are governments going to be doing is clear from the third.

I am just astounded that anyone in America thinks that people can form an institution where the foundational reasoning is as clear as day and the entire government of United States of America believe that they can do whatever they want when there is nothing else holding up the fort at all. You see you cannot have anything but total savagery and barbarity the moment these are not strictly followed by government because this is not a five thousand year old organic nation. I am surprised that 1.4 million whites in American Government think that they can do whatever they want and not strictly adhere to the founding principles and anything other than collapse of America into state of nature barbarism and looting and shooting and all other problems faced by collapsed state of nature environments have produced will not ensue. I am surprised because the government holds together the peace and tranquility of a civilised world.

Anyway, I am just totally amazed that a racial murdering scumbag like Bill Gates is considered with even a minor amount of esteem by the American Government. He's a mass-murdering evil criminal son of a bitch whose white baby self should have been blasted to pieces so that the walls make patterns from the dead white baby blood like Jackson Pollock's The Red Composition. Why does any reputable government esteem such a rotten slimy low-life charlatan? Mystery of nature.

Moments before in 1955, white baby Bill Gates.

3. ZULF IS SEEKING THE PERFECTION OF DESCRIBING BILL GATES AS A SUBLIME OBJECT OF DENIGRATION

Bill Gates is so disgusting, so abominable, so wretched and horrible, so evil and malevolent, so worthless, so vicious and undeserving of having lived even for two seconds among the good people of the world that I am seeking perfection in my denigration, something that is immortal.

I have been harmed in such indelible ways by this wretched miserable horror that I have produced various string of denigrations that form an oeuvre. But I am dissatisfied with them. Looking over my work, I am not impressed with their coherence. They seem of uneven quality. They do not have the sublime artistry that ought to make immortal characterisation of the true depths of depravity that this man represents. I am still searching for that genius that will turn many strands of denigrations into truly immortal denigration that will stand for thousands of years.

Eventually this will be a great masterpiece, something so profound and so symphonic that Macbeth and Jack The Ripper and hyenas and Savage Beasts of Hell will refuse to compete. I am still seeking this great genius here. I have improved, but this is not an easy task. He is so horrible that it's too much already to comprehend.

4. BILL GATES AS UNIFYING CENTER

I want to name 2020-2021 and perhaps longer as a period of Life of Zulf, especially for future historians and hagiographers of mine, as a period of great advances in my progress of understanding some aspects of human nature and politics, but also the productive period for my Denigration of Bill Gates Ouvre. I see some good developments here. The English author and scholar J. R. R. Tolkien wrote The Lord of the Rings between 1937 to 1949. I read it as I am quite fond of epic high fantasy along with science fiction and do love the ways in which the Romance tradition from early middle ages transformed over the millenium. The character of Gollum is a great work of artistic creation, and the artistic genre of painting Red Composition (1946) by Jackson Pollock is quite distant and is brought alive here as the splattering of Bill Gates' white baby blood in an ecstatic and dynamic event in the eternal war of good and evil. This I consider progress in for this part of my evolution.
