

HOW LEGITIMATE TOPICS OF CONVERSATION REGARDING AMERICAN WARS HAD CHANGED SINCE VIETNAM

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Years ago I was quite progressive, even Socialist, and in 2003 sometime, I was gripped by pangs of Conscience and joined the International Socialists in San Francisco. I was not compelled fully by revolutionary socialism in America, but I liked the moral issues and I was proud to be selling $1 newspapers with Abu Ghraib torture to yuppies in the Mission who were out to just have brunch in one of the snazzy restaurants on Valencia. I was a Scientist II at a pharmaceutical biotech then, but my heart was with the victims of Fallujah and elsewhere. At the time I did not even know that neocons had war plans for regime change in seven Muslim countries, or that it was 100% Israel and no Muslims who faked hijackings and remote controlled some planes in Twin Towers and demolished it to trigger those wars. I was strongly against the American wars in the Middle East then. It was around that time I read Howard Zinn's A People's History of the United States of America, and I was quite familiar with a lot of books by Noam Chomsky on US Foreign Policy. But on later reflection I realised that America's ability to talk about wars changed radically after Vietnam War. The Antiwar Movement had actually allowed Americans to defy all sorts of coercive patriotic ra ra and just declare anti-war stance. I was born in 1973 and so I perhaps was a bit spoiled and thought this was normal but this is a great transition in America's ability to gauge and judge actions of America in Wars. You see this needed United States to be the Global Hegemonic Power in a way. Disloyalty to the nation at war when it is a small tribal kingdom seems rather bad because presumably there is some actual defense involved, for the sake of country and family etc. Things were far past that in the Second World War. Vietnam War began with a self-inflicted wound in Gulf of Tonkin and engagement to protect French Colonial Interests. And Iraq was a disaster because 9/11 was done by Israel's Mossad and had no involvement of any al Qaeda folks at all. No, there were no 19 hijackers involved; some of them are real and BBC interviewed them quite alive in other countries.

What Vietnam did was allow the American people breathing room to go berserk against Global Hegemonic interests of whoever has Global Hegemonic interests.

Now US Defense is coy and wants to be clean, which is fine, but during Vietnam we carpet bombed all of Cambodia and we burned down entire villages and we had death squads killing insurgents in Iraq, and we did so many other outrageous bad things. We have killed literally 20 million people from 1945, around 60 percent on top of global homicide rate. I find it outrageous that US Defense is suddenly all prissy when an evil malevolent criminal cunt like Bill Gates cuts up my eyes and harms my Natural Rights. Why weren't you so prissy whenever non-white people were targeted in Iraq, in Afghanistan, in Vietnam? What's the story here US Defense? I am American, and I do believe in America. I am not racial, but

Date: June 24, 2021.

I will not forgive you for suddenly becoming prissy when a totally evil criminal cunt like Bill Gates cuts up my eyes for a year claiming white immunity to crimes and you don't bomb the shit out of all his factories and companies and yachts but you have absolutely no qualms about destroying the lives of people who had done nothing to us in Korea, in Vietnam, in Central America, in Iraq, everywhere on the planet. What do you want people to believe about you and your integrity and your principles exactly? Did the cat get your tongue when a vile malevolent white boy is the criminal cunt and not someone darker skinned.

Shape up fast, US Defense. History will be recording you like you would not believe. Why? Well mostly because Zulf is in town, and Zulf has the strange ability of making History take all sort of notice. I am not your Bill Gates type. Unless you deserve to be honoured in history you won't be. I don't give a fuck about your ethnicity or whatever. You need great Character and strong inner moral compass if you want to survive in posterity with moi.