

ZULF MARKS TWO AMERICAN PRESIDENTS AS GREAT AND TWO AS MISERABLE WRETCHED SAVAGES

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

I will here give you my assessment of two American Presidents as Great and two as miserable wretched savages. First the Great ones. President James Madison and President Franklin Delano Roosevelt were magnificent and Great.

1. MISERABLE WRETCHED SAVAGE PRESIDENTS

President Andrew Jackson and President Harry Truman were miserable savage wretches the worse of the two being Harry Truman, a truly evil savage beast and one of the worst disasters to befall human race. Andrew Jackson was only mildly better.

I cannot even bear the thought of Harry Truman so horrible he is to me. He's not the worst person in the history of the world; that is Bill Gates, but he's not that far above Bill. He did the horrifically evil Hiroshima/Nagasaki, which was much more evil than the Jewish Holocaust.

2. MY JUDGMENT ABOUT THESE MEN IS FINAL

I knew about them from high school, especially James Madison and Andrew Jackson from American History courses. During high school, my impression was good for James Madison and not good for Andrew Jackson. Later I learned about Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Harry Truman. I have had 49 years of life, so these are my final judgments about these gentlemen.

Now why would I flip-flop on my judgments at this age? It would affect my self-esteem, self-respect. I won't. These are my judgments and let posterity record them and let all stars and galaxies and existence witness my judgment about these men. They were dead before I was born. Even Harry Truman died in 1972 a year before my birth. He was a total miserable wretched rotten scumbag. You won't hear anything else about him from me.

3. OPINIONS AND CONVICTIONS HARDEN OVER TIME IN HUMAN NATURE

It is not true of course that all opinions converge to a strict unchanging limit for every person in a lifetime. But many do, and that is natural to expect. I think habituation and reinforcement are the driving forces in this. I have many things about which my opinions do not have a finality to them. But as years go by, if I have spent much time thinking about them, they do converge.

Another way of seeing this is that we make ourselves comfortable in existence, in society, in our inner mind and heart. And so we begin to have strong and clear views that we don't change easily after a while. And that's part of being human. As time goes by, I really do not have time to adapt any opinion or conviction I hold to accomodate anyone else at all. As time goes on, my feelings are that people everywhere ought to know what Zulf's opinions and convictions are, so I don't have to deal with their queries.

Here are some. If you don't like my opinions, that is good. Don't bother me, because they are set in stone and I won't budge easily at all. And that is good. Some people will like people I hate. So what? Let them. I don't want to deal with their justifications. I don't give a damn. It's not just about Presidents. It's about everything. I have opinions and love and hate things. Other people love things I hate. I really don't want to know why because I know why I hate things I hate. I don't really care about their story.

4. THAT'S VERY FUNNY AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

First of all, I just said James Madison and Franklin Delano Roosevelt are magnificent and great men. Second, if you read my note on "wanting things" you would know that I am not five years old and do not want influence. Given these two how do you deduce that I am seeking Anti-American influence. Why don't you look at the mirror American Government. You are not doing diddly squat to secure my natural rights defying US Declaration of Independence Preamble. Whose spreading Anti-American sentiments, me or you?
