

BRIEF PSYCHOLOGY LESSON FOR US EXECUTIVE WHITE PEOPLE

Look, US Executive White People. I don't know you personally at all. In my 34 years in America, I have been an urban intellectual professional for most of this time. I don't know you personally; you don't know me personally. But I am 48 and I know my beloved people the Human Race well enough.

You see, you are at most half a million people – the entire US Government is 2.1 million. The human race is 7.8 billion. So let's see. That's not even 0.006% of the world. You are a miniscule minority of the world. On the other hand, human beings can't really get to know and love more than around 150 people in their lives. Those are the balancing acts. We are always facing this problem, that our close friendships and loves are not going to be more than about 150 people each. And yet we have a world of 7.8 billion. Now you have your natural inclinations and prejudices. That's fine. But you are each also individuals.

When you have a situation where an American non-white person, such as myself, keeps asking for your enforcement of laws against a criminal such as Bill Gates, if you hesitate you run the risk of being judged yourself by all sorts of people. And the problem with judgment of people who don't know and love you personally is that they might slaughter the whole lot of you if they feel that interests of 7.8 billion are compromised by your character and your prejudices given that you are not random people but have the power of the Will of the American People in your professional lives.

Do you understand what I am talking about? You are in a balloon where all the people you know and your colleagues, say half a million people in Washington, wield the power granted by your professional positions, it is not your power. It is the power granted to you by government positions, i.e. the legitimate sovereign power of the Will of the American People. You don't know 330 million American people; that is beyond human capability. So you see the world in your balloon. And from your balloon, Bill Gates is admirable. Well your balloon is not my balloon. I am American. And I know that Bill Gates is a born criminal charlatan. He made some money, but that's not much in my book. Lots of people have made some money by huckstering all the way to Mesopotamian and Sumerian Empire. To you, and maybe everyone you know, he looks good. But I see a criminal college dropout who never tells any truth in his self-promotion at all. He is not a genius intellectually. You may have been seduced by his great genius, but I am a Princetonian with stellar academic record who had been surrounded by some of the brightest people in the world since youth, and I know the difference between high end intellect and a bullshit artist. He is a bullshit artist. Ok?

So now if you do not want me to consider you Enemy of Liberty for the Human Race, you have to use the powers granted to you by your professional positions and show me something I can believe. You think it may not matter since I am not as prominent. That's your headache. I don't give a damn, frankly. I am a scrupulously fair man. If you show me evidence that you are genuinely interested in securing my Natural Rights, that you stand with Liberty of the Human Race, I will certainly not paint you red and black and so on and concede that I might have had false suspicions and back off.
