

ZULF'S VIEWS ABOUT YOUNG WOMEN WHO WANT TO BE REBELLIOUS AND DRESS "FRANKLY"

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Young women who want to be rebellious and dress 'frankly', meaning with revealing cleavages and tight short dresses showing off their body, these women are immature and idiotic. What are they rebelling against exactly? Human nature has been slow in changing for three million years. These things are sexually arousing for most men. So they want that reaction, sexual arousal in men, in public. Well if that's what floats their boat, that's great. But men's sexual arousal is not always positive. Some men are attracted and give some compliments. Other men are more predatory when sexually aroused. I don't understand at all the idea that women are doing any favours for themselves by pushing these sorts of bounds. What does it matter what they think men should do? Men will do whatever men will do.

Now most men are gentlemen, and so they would not worry about this too much. I don't understand why these young women expect to be treated with dignity if they do not project dignity. You see, the problem is this. They are not the only women on Earth, these women who want to be dressing frankly. Men see women dressed in a thousand ways every day in a city. There are millions of women who know how to dress in a dignified manner. They don't show off their bodies to provoke sexual responses at all. In that situation, these young women who want to dress in provocative manners do not project dignified respectability. They do not project their features that are more highly valued, their intellectual capabilities, their fashion sense. They want to rebel against how men and women have been for a million years? I do not understand the rebellion at all.

You see, frank dressing might be theoretically appealing in closed circles, where people are all into the aesthetic or style, but they will always be judged as skanky and slutty in ordinary public spaces because the norms are not new. They have been around from Roman Empire. There is no possibility that the entire world will change to accomodate the fantastic demands of some young people at any given moment in time.

1. ISN'T IT HORRIBLE THAT PEOPLE ARE JUDGMENTAL?

Yes, it's horrible that people are judgmental. It would be much better if you were the goddess or god of your entire universe and you could float naked through the winds and the wind's own forget-me-nots blew and you could rise through the clouds and all of existence shone its love to you without judgment.

Unfortunately, you cannot control their judgments, so you just have to do something not to get stuck in a crappy situation because you got steamrolled by the judgments instead of avoiding them and doing something with your life that is meaningful.
