

WHAT SORT OF THING IS UNITED STATES OF AMERICA?

I will tell you here about United States of America. I was an excellent student in high school and so I understand these issues extremely well. There are all sorts of confusions about this, especially because people want to be clever and try to make new points etc. These are filled with dangers. People have to understand things clearly and simply first.

United States of America is not the land, the map of the United States is just the land where United States of America has jurisdiction. It is an organisation of people. So that is the first thing to understand. I will tell you about the organisation of people and not worry about the land.

United States of America is a Multi-Ethnic Classical Liberal Democratic Republic. It is based on two fundamental foundational texts or documents. They are US Declaration of Independence, and US Constitution. These texts define what this organisation is. The principles of these actual texts are extremely central to the United States of America.

US Declaration declares all men are created equal with Natural Rights including Life, Liberty and Pursuit of Happiness, that are granted by Nature (the wording is 'endowed by the Creator' which is Christian terminology) but religion does not matter as I say 'Nature' and the key point is that these rights are not granted by other people but are intrinsic to the individual.

When the document says "We believe" and so on, that is an official declaration of what the American people believe, so "We" are the American people. Do not be confused about this. The "We believe" is not just the ones who signed the documents; the "we" is not white people only; the "we" covers all Americans, i.e. all white Americans, black Americans, Hispanic Americans, Asian Americans, everyone. This "we" in the document is a representation of all Americans. It includes me even though my name is Muslim.

Second, the document also tells us what "We" will believe, which is that "Governments among Men are formed to secure Natural Rights of the people". Let us be very clear. That is the official declaration of the belief and creed and faith of the American people.

Now let's take some side issues: what happens when 80 percent of actual American people do not believe that Governments are formed among men to secure Natural Rights? The right answer is too bad and American people of United States of America will still believe that Governments are formed among Men to secure Natural Rights of people. This is very important to understand. The "We" of United States Foundations do not actually need to reflect the opinions of actual Americans on these issues. They are like a Holy Text version of American people, and idealisation that does not actually particularly care what the popular view of 80 percent is regarding why Governments are formed among Men. This point is very important to understand. The "American People" of the founding documents declare the beliefs that are consecrated as Holy and Unchanging in the foundation of the United States of America. This will only change if the United State of America is dissolved and not until that time. A lot of people are confused about this. They say, "I do not believe that Governments are formed among men to secure Natural Rights and I am American". Well that just makes you not part of the "American People" of the founding documents. No one will give a fuck about your difference till United States dissolves. It just puts you outside the "American People" of the founding documents.

You have either the choice of accepting that Governments are formed among men to secure Natural Rights or be considered inconsistent and a pariah to the American People of the Founders. And these are not a big deal. You can have a happy fruitful life in America without joining the Hallowed American People that are mentioned in the founding documents. Just don't expect much sympathy from Zulf. I am part of that American People and I am fine with the beliefs that are expressed in US Declaration. You don't want to join this American People that is your choice and Zulf will not stop you. Please don't come whining to Zulf about how the US Declaration ought to be replaced. Zulf will eject you out the window with great pleasure.

Zulf believes in Universal Natural Rights and as a consequence is quite clear that US Declaration is correct in a Universal interpretation, and Zulf believes that Eleanor Roosevelt and fifty four countries advanced Civilisation in 1948 with UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights. If you want to be considered part of Civilisation rather than Savagery, you will believe the same as the US Founders. Don't be surprised if you are considered a Savage Beast if you go against it.

1. SUBSTANCE OF UNITED STATES FOUNDATIONS

United States of America is the governing structure of a population of 320 million people. I won't go into some of the details, checks and balance of government powers in Executive, Judicial, and Legislative branches of government. These are good novelties introduced by American Founders and they are worth discussing elsewhere.

I will instead focus on what I think is much deeper in substance, the rational for why Governments are created among men to secure Natural Rights. That is what the Hallowed American People of the Founders believe. And I believe this personally as an enlightened approach to understanding political organisation myself. So I am quite pleased to tell you why this is right.

You see the Government is some group of people – maybe a couple of million people in America today – who get paid from taxes collected from the population. In other words, all American people are doing their own thing. Maybe they are involved in carpentry. Maybe they spend their daily lives cutting up wood and creating beautiful furniture that then get sold in the markets and they get their livelihood from the sales. Their worries are what? Their worries are their professional activity, furniture markets, taking care of college for their kids, having some savings, ordinary normal worries. Now suddenly IRS shows up and tells them in no uncertain terms 'give money or else' and kaboom some 30% or whatever of their hard earned money just disappears into the national coffers. They will be wondering, "Hey, wait a minute. I worked my ass off for that money. Tell me what you're going to do with it." And they can be told, "Relax, brother, we're not just robbing you to masturbate. We are taking this money and we will do things that are necessary for your well-being. We'll secure your and everyone else's Natural Rights. Your Life, Liberty, and Pursuit of Happiness is secure for our work." They might say, "Hmm, you need all that money to do that?" "Yes, sir. We have a lot of things we are doing with this money so that your Natural Rights are secured. You see all the cops over there? They are ensuring no one robs your house. You see the elementary school over there? We are paying teachers so your kids can have an education." "Um, fine, fine."

Now imagine if you are the IRS man and you tell them "Governments are created among men to worry about markets." Let me assure you that the carpenter would be furious and rushing to his shotguns and submachine gun collection, "I'll show those brazen robbers what I do when they take my money and they pay these fucks to do nothing all day that is valuable to me and jerk off all day thinking about other people's money and markets. What's in it for me?"

2. UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT EXISTS ONLY TO SECURE NATURAL RIGHTS

The US Declaration is a deep document and the product of great genius. I is not a frivolous document. It specifies clearly what we, i.e. American People, believe about the purpose of Governments. The purpose of Governments is not to manage economy and other things. It is to secure Natural Rights of people. There is no ambiguity in the language of the US Declaration about what is the purpose of Government among men. This is not empty rhetoric either. It is a Foundational Document that defines the United States of America.
