

LIFE SATISFACTION IS SLIGHTLY HIGHER FOR THOSE WHO FIND SEX JUSTIFIED BEFORE MARRIAGE

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

The conditional probability of higher life satisfaction given sex not justified before marriage is 76.95%; the conditional probability of higher life satisfaction given sex is justified before marriage is 78.97%.

This is interesting, for this sexual liberal advantage is 2.02%, not very large but enough to put this sort of moral value in a different class than those that support Aristotle's Virtue-Eudaimonia theory. This is a human race level result from World Values Survey.

Let's attempt to see how the probability of high life satisfaction changes with level of resistance to sex before marriage.

This is interesting because the peak is not strong preference for sex before marriage.
