

ZULF'S GREAT AND INSPIRING SPEECH FOR THE FUTURE OF HUMAN RACE

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Long before we enslaved and treated each other badly, which is relatively recent, we shared food and did not enslave each other at all for six million years in Africa. That was when things were still good between us. We survived against all manner of troubles, all sorts of quite scary sabre-tooth tigers and other sorts of predators. So our 75,000 years of being apart and alienated from our true history was a difficult time where we shared our hunt in small bands and were egalitarian by and large in Africa.

And every cell of our body has record of our joint struggle, for 250 million years of mammal-ness. This is not a joke. We human beings share 99.9% of the same exact letters in our 6 billion long genetic code, not one hair out of place. If not for some maneuvering of the world we might have ended up totally identical. We love our difference and uniqueness but we are not so different across the world. We are the survivors of a joint struggle for survival of 250 million years of mammalian evolution. And if we are wise, and respect the traces of this history in every cell of our body, we will enjoy another 250 million years together in harmony.

We are One. We are the Great and Noble Race of Man. Today, this means not as much as what it might mean in the distant future, when we encounter other races who are not Man.

Let us then not consider the shallow differences that have developed over a short span of 75,000 years, where we have taken to superficial misunderstandings. We are a Single People and our destiny is tied together. Let us not be confused and seduced by glib charlatans with malevolent plans for wars and strife between us. Let us rise above our shallow differences. Even 75,000 years pass by like a blink of an eye for the ancient genes that animate our lives. Our unity is encoded in our very life and cannot be erased.
