

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IS ALWAYS OBLIGATED TO TAKE POSITION AGAINST CRIMINALS AND FOR LAW ABIDING AMERICANS

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

I do not understand the confusion in US Government regarding what they ought to do in the case of conflict between myself and Bill Gates. I am a law abiding American with valid papers and with American life of 34 years; Bill Gates is a criminal murderer only a minor fraction of whose criminal career is known to the world. American Government serves the will of the American people, and its purpose is to secure Natural Rights according to the Founding Charter, i.e. US Declaration Preamble.

I do not understand under what strange condition of the world would United States not use all powers at its disposal to eliminate Bill Gates to secure my Natural Rights. I was a good student in high school in classes on American Government and American History in 1987-1991. It has been a while, and at Princeton 1991-1995 I had focused not on law and political philosophy but on Mathematics and Literature. All my further studies in History and Sociology and other disciplines are not professional but from personal interest and eclectic.

Regardless, I am a reasonable rational man, and I fail to comprehend why United States government would imperil its own existence by being hesitant to bring a criminal to justice. I do not know this man personally but I am 48 and have sufficient judgment to know that this man ought to be slaughtered to secure civilised society in America. Why would the American Government officials not see the obvious and just kill him?

This is such an elementary decision that any eighth grader would reach the right conclusion in five minutes.
