

ZULF'S THEORY OF HOW BILL GATES IS MORALLY LESS DEVELOPED THAN A HOUSE CAT

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

We human beings do have quite an extraordinary genetic heritage for moral judgment and moral growth. It's in all our genes. A Japanese team found neural correlates to moral praise and moral blame. So this is a universal phenomena; none of these systems are new and all of them have ancient roots before Homo Sapiens evolved around 4-6 million years ago in Africa.

But the genetic heritage is not instantaneous. The mommy has to love the son, and social intelligence needs to be tested against other kids in school, and usually between say 8-20 years a boy will have independent moral views develop. The genes are doing their thing, but experience and thought and convictions will guide the development. In my case, for example, I was deeply internal, studious, and was in conversation with my mentor Lys Waltien and spoke for hours after classes ended with her about Christianity and Nietzsche's rebellion, about Marxism and many other issues. She was extraordinary with Catholic erudition. Later at Princeton I was trying to deepen some of the understanding, and in 2003-4 I could not stand it and joined the International Socialist Organisation primarily to vent about my anger at the massacres in Iraq and protest the war effort. I was always multi-ethnic and never had any contempt for white people. Why would I? Lys Waltien was Irish Catholic and a great and Angelic influence on my life; later Jeff McNeal at Princeton took a chance on me and I produced good work in Several Complex Variables. My moral development was not based on street gangs and the law of the streets but highly lofty and based on study of Dostoevsky's The Brothers Karamazov and other fairly sophisticated matter. My father and grandfather were in public service and so I had already a great start in my relationship with society. I accepted and embraced not just America and all the variety of American people but the entire Human Race in the end as my people and therefore that my efforts ought to benefit all human beings.

Bill Gates, in contrast was already a psychopath, was isolated for his particular good coding skills and his mother was connected in Seattle and he was introduced to the Board of IBM early on and so he actually did not develop morally in his teenage years at all. So he was underdeveloped and psychopathic. And this is why he is totally tone deaf and outrageously malevolent. He is both extremely entitled and thinks he is allowed to do any evil horror to anyone because he is white. This justification is a construction that replaced moral development and he had some success and so he had social support to degenerate in moral views. Now American people are not in the same place as this. He is an outrageous misfit in human race generally. He is literally handicapped and has no moral compass at all.

He is not just inferior in moral virtues to me – and I am quite excellent in my moral character – but in fact he is inferior in moral character to billy goats and house cats. This is not surprising because he had simply been psychopathic and he learned to deceive people and gain kudos. He is a grave threat to the American people because he has power and no moral sense whatsoever.