

ZULF DOES NOT ACTUALLY CARE ABOUT WHAT YOU WILL DO

ZULFIKAR MOINUDDIN AHMED

Who are 'you'? You are one of eight billion people. You are someone other than Zulf. Forgive me, you, but I don't particularly care about what you will do. I have a short life and have to expend a lot of it focusing on what I will do. I don't really have a great deal of time worrying about what you will do. And even if I had time, I can't really follow it because chances are high that you're not exactly like me enough for me to guess.

I am wise and never worry and spend time on what you will do. Now if you do something that interests me, something that impresses me, and so on, I might spend some time and try to learn and appreciate what you do.

I am amazed at idiots who don't know what they are doing themselves and get concerned about what other people's motives are and what they will do and so on. It's irrational waste of time. Live your life, forget what other people will do. Don't even guess. Just ask if you have to. But do explain that you don't actually have the slightest clue about what they will do so they should not assume you know.
