We don't need to be Jewish to know the horrors of racialism, for when we are in 1930s Germany, we are all Jewish, for we can see our brothers and sisters being treated miserably and their humanity being desecrated. We are human beings, we are human beings who are proud of our conscience, of our empathy and we recognize ourselves in every human being who has been de-humanised and mistreated not just in Germany in the 1930s, but everywhere in the world in all ages and all times. That is one of our greatest secret prides. These Bill Gates of the world do not know what superiority is for us; he was a psychopath and had abnormal development. We, the great and noble human race are proudest of our superiority as individuals when our conscience and moral sympathy for the suffering of all people is highest, when we can instantly recognise our brotherhood with the victim rather than the barbaric criminal. This is not a game; this is indeed what makes us superior human beings, and we carry this deep pride generally without much event. It is in our ability to sympathise with the suffering of non-kin instinctively and without delay that is the test of our superior moral senses. We are able to feel kinship with every victim of injustice in every ages and weep for their suffering as if it were our own. And that strengthens us and does not weaken us.
